Prather Kalman Participates in UH Program
CPAs work with visiting Chinese professionals

HOUSTON – Prather Kalman P.C. recently provided 65 hours of seminar lectures and practical studies to 35 visiting Chinese accountants and auditors through the firm’s contract with the University of Houston’s Asian American Studies Center (AASC).

While the Center will host the visiting members of the Chinese National Petroleum Corp. (CNPC) through December, Prather Kalman completed its seminars last month. Topics covered included accounting principles, practical methods for oil and gas accounting as well as audit concepts in internal control and risk assessment.

“We selected Prather Kalman based on the firm’s extensive auditing experience and are pleased they were part of this esteemed group,” said Dr. Yali Zou, AASC director. “In addition to Prather Kalman, those leading the current program include corporate executives, former CEOs and CFOs as well as representatives from major corporate auditing firms.”

More than 1,500 educators, public administrators and business executives from China have received training through the AASC’s professional training programs. The center was established in 1995 to recognize the contributions Asian Americans have made to the U.S.

“The program participants underwent a rigorous selection process,” said Gail Prather, Prather Kalman president and co-owner. “We are happy to have played a role in expanding their education of auditing principals and enjoyed working with the leadership team, as well.”
